ENV 4417: WATER QUALITY & TREATMENT
Department of Civil & Environmental Engineering
University of South Florida

Semester Project   Prof J A Cunningham

Stage 0   Fall 2015

Due date: Thursday, August 27, at the beginning of class.

1. Form a group of students. On the first day of class, the instructor will tell you how many students should be in your group.

2. All students should read the course syllabus thoroughly. The most recent version of the syllabus is available on Canvas. As you read it, make a list of any questions you have about the syllabus. After all group members have read the syllabus, have one group member send me an e-mail with any questions that arose. If you have no questions, then no e-mail is required.

3. In my experience with ENV 4001, some groups have been penalized for committing plagiarism on their final reports. When asked what happened, all groups claimed that they did not know their actions constituted plagiarism. To ensure that you and your group do not suffer a similar penalty this semester, all students should complete USF's on-line tutorial on plagiarism. The tutorial is available on-line at:
   http://davon.etg.usf.edu/share/plagiarism/
   (This tutorial has been revised as of 2012…I liked the old one better, but the new one isn't bad either.) As you complete the tutorial, make a list of any questions that arise. After all group members have completed the tutorial, have one group member send me an e-mail with any questions that arose. If you have no questions, then no e-mail is required.

4. Have all members of your group print and sign their names in the appropriate spaces below. Sign your name on the line immediately below your printed name. Your signature indicates that you have read the syllabus and that you have conducted the plagiarism tutorial. Each group should turn in one hard copy of this form, with the names and signatures of all group members.
